The Berkeley City Council majority at the September 25th meeting refused to officially name the new mini-park on Acton Street, in honor of neighborhood activist Charles Dorr.

The Berkeley Recreation Commission had recommended that the park be named in honor of Charles Dorr who was instrumental in developing public pressure for the park to be built. Residents of the SUDS neighborhood surrounding the lawn bowling greens next to the new park had already held a ceremony and placed a sign at Charles Dorr Park.

The outspoken Dorr, a member of the Commission on Aging, active in SUDS and the April Coalition, had few friends on the City Council.

Councilman Ed Kaligren and Henry Ramsey objected to the park being named after a living person. Sue Hone wondered why the park should be named after a man. They all wanted criteria for the naming of parks.

Loni Hancock made a motion that the Recreation Commission's recommendation for Charles Dorr Park be accepted. Councilwoman Hancock said that the other Councilmembers were being extraordinarily petty in objecting to the name. No Councilmembers had objected to naming a park at Dwight and Dana after William J. Davis of the YMCA, an earlier recommendation of the Recreation Commission passed unanimously by the Council a few months earlier.

Rejecting Hancock's motion to name the park after Mr. Dorr, the Council passed Henry Ramsey's motion to defer action until proper park-naming criteria have been adopted. Councilmembers Hone, Kaligren, Ramsey, Sweeney and Widener voted for the motion to take no action. Councilmembers Hancock and Rumford voted against it. Councilmembers Kelley and Simmons were absent.

At its meeting of September 18, the Council came within one vote of passing a compromise rent control ordinance proposed by the Rent Control Board. The missing vote belonged to Mayor Warren Widener. Mayor Widener, who campaigned for election as a rent control supporter, cast the deciding vote to defeat the rent control ordinance.

The Mayor refused to publicly explain his vote, stating that his position was perfectly clear. He has proposed no amendments to the ordinance.

With all motions requiring 5 votes to pass, the rent control ordinance failed with Councilmembers Hancock, Kelley, Widener, and Cherie Gaines voting against it.

LETTERS TO THE COLLECTIVE

To the Editor of Grassroots:

As a subscriber to Grassroots, I deeply resent the suggestion of Grabowicz' article on Sue Rodriguez in your August issue. While the article attempts to highlight the struggles of women in our society, it falls short in accurately representing the experiences of women of color. The article reduces the diversity within the women's movement and fails to give credit to the work of women of color.

Sincerely,

The Berkeley City Council will within a month adopt a resolution to settle a suit between HUD and the City of Berkeley. This agreement commits the City to put up 1,500 units by November 1st of this year if the Berkeley Redevelopment Agency (BRA) has not sold a note to the City of Berkeley. The City Council has not for many months dealt with any of the issues that have been raised by the residents of the district. This is a business administration, and its major purpose is to protect American business.

On September 11 and claimed the lives of thousands of Chileans was the direct result of three years of U.S. intervention. Every since the day Salvador Allende took power in October, 1970, the Chilean Right and certain elements in the Army, together with U.S. interests, have been scheming for an end to the popular government.

The U.S. government denies its role in the coup, evidence mounts that the right-wing takeover was planned in Washington as well as in Santiago. "This is a business administration, and its business is to protect American business." Secretary of State Rogers told a meeting of U.S. businessmen with interests in Chile in October, 1971. Some of those interests include Allende's first acts was to nationalize the lucrative copper mines. Major investors included Anaconda, Kennecott and ITT. One of Socialist President Salvador Allende's first acts was to nationalize the U.S.-owned copper holdings (with the unanimous support of the United Nations). Other U.S. investments were bought out. And there was more state than immediate dollar losses. The U.S. feared that Chile's actions would encourage similar nationalizations in neighboring countries.

Believe it or not, we are publishing twice a month! This means that Grassroots takes twice as much work and twice as much money. If you haven't renewed your subscription (or would like to subscribe for the first time or make a donation) please send it to P.O. Box 274, Berkeley. Grassroots always needs help. We meet every Thursday at 2022 Blake Street at 8 P.M.

The Berkeley City Council will within the next few weeks have before it a proposal to build an industrial park between HUD and the City of Berkeley. The City Council has not for many months dealt with any of the issues that have been raised by the residents of the district. This is a business administration, and its major purpose is to protect American business.

The policy was the result of top level decision-making in the Nixon administration. When the CIA was one. According to the Senate ITT hearings, the CIA in 1970 had been authorized to spend $400,000 for "CIA propaganda action." Plans against Allende. CIA agents in Chile worked out a hard-line policy to punish Chile for its nationalizations of U.S. companies and to warn other nations not to pursue similar policies. This included cutting Chile off from public and private credit sources, in order to prevent Chile from buying goods, many of which were available only from the U.S.-owned U.S. companies and to warn other nations not to pursue similar policies. This included cutting Chile off from public and private credit sources, in order to prevent Chile from buying goods, many of which were available only from the U.S.-owned enterprises.

The Nixon Administration admits that it had foreknowledge of the coup.

MINI DISTRICTS: A NEW CITY GOVERNMENT PLAN

The concept of mini-districting developed from an analysis of the history of at-large elections for the Berkeley City Council. The at-large election system is grossly discriminatory. Poor, working people, students, and women have effectively kept out of office because of the financial and media resources necessary to be elected and the money and time necessary to serve on the city council.

For many years people in Berkeley have recognized that the city manager system is unsuited to modern problems, and have discussed the need for elected representatives to have greater control over the city bureaucracy.

In the mini-district proposal one council member is elected from each of 29 mini-districts with a population of about 4000 each. Surprisingly, the boundaries of the districts can easily approximate natural boundaries such as major streets, the Hearst Strip, and U.C. Berkeley. (The map accompanying this article is a tentative plan for the boundaries.)

29 DISTRICTS

The 29 district representatives, along with 6 elected at large, will make up the governing body of the city, the city council. Each council member will serve a two-year term. The idea of mini-districting is not to isolate districts and have them fight one another for power and services, but to ensure that diverse neighborhoods in Berkeley of representation of their choice. A few council members elected at large along with those elected by districts will give the necessary balance to the council.

It is especially important, is the fact that an at-large campaign will raise citywide issues that district candidates must then also consider.

At the first meeting of the council, elections will be held for the 7 person executive committee. Members of the executive are full-time councilors with commensurate salary. All other councilors are part-time and are paid token amounts to defray any expenses incurred while serving on the council who will be selected for the executive committee based on proportional strength in the council (by charter provision). Thus every minority caucus with a strength of 5 (or multiples of 5) will elect one (or more) of their members to the executive committee.

COALITIONS

As an example of how this works, let's say that there is enough strength for a group to elect one member but not enough for 2 (6 to 9 votes). A compromise will need to be made with another faction having unused votes (from 1 to 4) in order to fill the second council seat. Thus we will end up with two coalitions.

This provision is specifically designed to bring about a stable majority coalition.

The full council is charged with all legislative functions and all ultimate city authority. The executive committee serves at the will of the council and can be thought of as taking much of the role of the present city manager. It is responsible for making recommendations to the council and carrying out the policies of the council. Department heads will report directly to the executive committee, which will coordinate administrative activities. The council will formulate the annual budget for presentation to the council.

The mini-district proposal has a strong committee structure which is coordinated by the executive committee. There are 3 standing committees: 1) Environment and physical planning, 2) General services such as police, fire, garbage, sewers, etc. and 3) Social services such as welfare, child care, health care planning, etc. These committees will monitor department activities and, in consultation with city departments and citizens groups, will formulate programs, evaluate policies, and approve the proposals. All recommendations will be forwarded to the executive committee for coordination with other committees' work before forwarding to the full council for final consideration and approval.

COMMITTEES

The general makeup of the three standing committees will be referred in the charter. Two of the committees will have 9 council members each and the third 10 members. Above the council will be committees for tax reform, land use (or any other conceivable subject) are not prohibited but will be established as necessary through ordinance.

The relationship between the council and executive is purposely not rigidly defined. It is a question of ultimate authority and responsibility. The council may delegate authority as it sees fit to the executive committee created by ordinance, to the executive, or to the standing committees. And council members may wish at times to strengthen its own role by assuming direct authority over certain matters.

Much time has been spent by the Charter Review Committee in exploring the concept of decentralization and neighborhood councils. The mini-district concept is totally compatible with strong neighborhood organizations and in fact would encourage their growth. Unfortunately a finished proposal on neighborhood councils is not yet available. It is being worked on, however, and will be incorporated into the mini-district proposal.

CHILE: coup made in USA

The evidence of U.S. involvement was sufficient to convince many Americans with experience in Chile. "There has never been a clearer case of American involvement," stated Stanford University political science professor Richard Fagen.

"The U.S. started into chaos, then supplied military support" for the coup. Fagen judged the coup from 18 months with the Ford Foundation in Chile.

Given the evidence of U.S. involvement, we as Americans have a particular responsibility to support the Chilean people against the fascist government and its U.S. supporters.

WHAT CAN WE DO NOW?

- The Ad Hoc Coalition has been holding regular meetings in San Francisco. Committees set up to organize specific actions include Ongoing Education, Fundraising, Media, Mobilization, and Telegram-Petitions. Anyone interested in working with the Coalition should contact the NICI office.

- Current focus of telegrams-letter campaign is the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

1. Telegram or write to Senator William Fulbright, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee:

   "We ask you to urge the Senate to override the US. Senate Foreign Relations Committee's proposal which nullifies the power of the Senate to override the President's veto.

   Committee: 2. Telegram or write to:

   Senator Gale McGee, Chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee:

   "We ask you to urge that further cuts in aid to Chile be held.

   Committee: 3. Telegram or write to:

   Senator Edmund Muskie, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee:

   "We urge you to convene hearings on the possible U.S. role in the coup in Chile. Petitions to the three above members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee are being circulated. The petitions incorporate the below texts:

   "Senator Mike Mansfield urging the convening of hearings on the U.S. role in the coup.

   Write, wire or call your Senator and Congressman urging support for the above and for the cutoff of ALL U.S. aid to the junta."

   An International Week of Solidarity with Chile is being planned for October 8th to 14th. We urge everyone to participate in events, which will be announced.

   Two recently made documentary films on Chile, "When the People Awake" and "Introduction a Chile" will be shown in the Bay Area. San Francisco showings will be at Berkeley on October 5, 6, and 7 at the U.C. Extension Center at 55 Laguna St., and in Berkeley at Newman Hall on October 5, 9, and 10, and at Wheeler Hall on campus on October 13. "Introduction a Chile," made in Chile, gives an historical background to the struggles of the Chilean working class. "When the People Awake" is written in Chile in 1972 and 1973, deals with some of the questions raised by the United Popular Front and various other groups of Chileans.

PRIME RANKS

Lately, however, the upper and lower classes have broken ranks. Journalists, the lais des mers of their times, have begun to question the surface in the elite field of literary figures, while novelists have turned to journalism to make a name for themselves. Using a technique called the New Journalism, mavericks from both groups have begun to combine journalism and fiction in creating the "non-fiction novel.

The new genre involves much more detailed reporting on an obscure subject, perhaps a small area in the heart of the larger society or a particular problem which is so well known as to be regarded as a fact of life. In order to tell this story, the writer must find a place in the larger society where the story can be told and, in the process, achieve a sense of self-consciousness. Scenes are laid out like a tableau before the reader's gaze. And often the reporter personally appears as a character with his prejudices and peculiarities, his follies and foibles. The reporter is no longer a mere recorder of fictional devices as symbolism, stream-of-consciousness, imitation and varying point of view. What is new is that the reporter is a reaction to the modern novel, and has come to be called the "non-fiction novel." Populist sentiment has it that journalism "takes little talent. You just knock 'em down with the lead paragraph, then drag 'em along through the story. That's it - if you get 'em to the end, you've done a good job," remarked one non-so-well-informed source.

Journalists themselves, according to Tom Wolfe, feel inferior to novelists and aspire beyond tomorrow's deadline to that infrangible future day when they will write their own novel. Wolfe conceives of a three-tiered class structure in the journalistic field. The novelists are the forefront of literature. Below them, the men of letters - essayists, biographers, critics - constitute a middle class. At the bottom, the locally reporter, time-bound and artistically restricted, gather the dust of the great publishing firms with his quill and sten. ...Genetics is currently a subject of political and social concern. It has attracted non-scientists who view with alarm genetic problems that the society of man hasn't yet learned to handle. It's the use of pseudogenetics by people like Jesse and Joachim Yet, there was little reflection of such a gathering with a more constructive society. This group sponsored two geneticists but that it would be necessary a gathering with a more constructive atmosphere. The difference was not just in the size, but was evident in the attitude of the participants who were people who were concerned with political and regulatory decisions which affect people's lives.

Mutagens are substances which can produce genetic changes which can be passed on to future generations. Some mutagens are good for the organism in which they occur. Geneticists but that it would be necessary for the physicists who worked on the Manhattan Project should have mutagens also cause cancer. The vast majority of mutagens are things to be considered.
Since Berkeley adopted an Affirmative Action program for hiring women and minorities, many businesses in the community have expressed interest in supplementing that program with incentives for flexible work schedules.

WHAT IS JOB RESTRUCTURING?
In most cases, job restructuring means any form of flexible work schedule in which a person works less than full-time. Under a job restructuring program, work time can be:
- Full-day
- 2.5 hours per day
- 4.5 or 6 hours per day
- 4.6 months on, 6 months off...

Obviously, there can be many variations of the above. Conceptually, job restructuring can encompass:
1. PAIRED JOBS. Two people share one full-time job with equal responsibility for the entire workload. They can fill in for each other when one is ill; they can bring in temporary staff to help perform.
   Example: recreation worker and gardener.
2. SHARED JOB. Two people divide a job between them with responsibility for half the work. Example: public health nurse.
3. SPECIALIST. A person is responsible for a single aspect of a job, the demands of which comprise less than a full-time week. Example: personnel interviewer.

NATIONAL TRENDS
A recent Kiplinger report to businessmen hailed job restructuring by saying, "We think that it will be THE revolutionary change in the labor market during the next few years." (Oct. 27, 1972)

Job restructuring is now being viewed by businesses as a way of meeting the current economic crisis and is seen as a natural continuation of the century-long trend towards a shortening of the work week while providing for the growing population. Nationally, for instance, we need a 20% increase in the labor force to meet the growing demand for primary and secondary school teachers, and this increase in demand will result in the holding of part-time jobs.

ONE WEEKEND PER MONTH
A professional research firm, commission by the National Business Conditions Council, predicts that one weekend in each month is the ideal schedule for the partially handicapped, and students.

FILM: SI SE PUEDE

The program will be 4. Intermezzos by Brahms, Beethoven Sonata, Opus 31, Hancock's "Red Was A" short contemporary French piece; and Schubert Sonata in B Flat.
Doors open at 8:30. $5, Students $1.50. Refreshments served.

VOTER REGISTRATION
Make sure that your friends and family are properly registered to vote for the November special election on the proposition of Proposition 17. Sunday, October 7, is the last day.

If you voted in November 1972 or registered since then, you're still registered. If you've moved you must re-register if new residents are immediately eligible to register.

Voting registration locations: Berkeley City Hall 8-5 weekdays or any fire station 10-11, 3-5, 7-9 everyday. On October 6 and 7 there will be registrars at the corner of Durant and Telegraph from at least noon until 6 p.m.

It is also the key to increasing the number of minorities and women in the labor force, and there are indications that the community will provide without decreasing the number of present workers. It will also provide a method of offering jobs to those who need to work, but who are unable to hold down standard full-time jobs. Example: women with no comparable training, the partially handicapped, and students.

Economist Carol Greenwald, who heads the Business section of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston claims that, "The firm that broadens its pool of job opportunities will probably experience greater productivity and lower unit costs, due to rapid and dramatic decreases in absenteeism, turnover, recruitment activity, and overtime pay."

Says well-known economist Sylvia Porter, "Part-time work is much more important than the four-day week...that’s where the trend is only."

In the public sector, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health has found that their part-time case workers had one-third the attrition rate of regular public health workers and that the workload of each full-time worker was 39% -- not 50% -- of a full-time worker.

Harold G. Barke and Senator John Tunney introduced a bill recently to provide for part-time flexible employment on the federal level (S0220).

There have been many research studies and demonstrations to show that job restructuring is a valid, practical idea with far reaching benefits to everyone concerned. Yet, there has been no city to establish and encourage voluntary job sharing as a public policy. Berkeley takes another chance to set the pace for the country.

JOB RESTRUCTURING IN BERKELEY
As early as 1971, Berkeley adopts concerning job restructuring should carefully consider inclusion of the following:
1. The program must be voluntary.
2. We do not want to deny full-time employment to anyone who wants or needs it.
3. Development of the restructured jobs should be monitored by a group which is racially and sexually balanced to as to provide a full range of viewpoints and to make sure it might be accomplished by placing responsibility for this development in the hands of the Personnel Department and the Affirmative Action Subcommittee.
4. Fringe benefits should be applied on the same basis.
5. No job should be exempted from restructuring options available to Berkeley City employees.

ADVANTAGES OF JOB RESTRUCTURING
For the Employer:
* Highly qualified workers can be attracted. Many talented people cannot become into full-time work but would eagerly embrace part-time work.
* Productivity and worker efficiency increases significantly. Part-time work allows outpatients and part-time workers because a person can keep up a faster pace for 4 hours than for 8 hours.

* Psychological and commitment of part-time workers results in a rapid increase in absenteeism, turnover, training periods, and recruitment time.

For the Employee:
* A method of transition is provided for those with expertise in one area who wish to move into other fields.
* Higher education can be combined with job training. Talents and qualifications can be used while time is spent with family and community.

* Sharing of the responsibilities and problems of a job tends to lessen strain and burnout.

* Psychological advantages include sustained levels of energy and enthusiasm.

JOB RESTRUCTURING ADVANTAGES FOR THE COMMUNITY
* Minority personnel and women workers are offered new ways of breaking into the work force at professional levels.
* Older people, who lack energy for an 8-hour day but who want to work are offered an alternative.
* Young people at Berkeley and University students with specialized training can become involved in the community.

* Middle-aged people who wish to return to the work force and those whose formal education was cut short may be reintegrated.

* A few part-time jobs that rapidly phased out can now train new workers and explore other avenues of employment.

* The partially handicapped, who cannot work 8 hours a day, can find employment.

* Welfare rolls will decrease because job restructuring offers alternatives between welfare and the four-day week, 5 days-a-week job and welfare.

Councilwoman Lori Hancock has introduced a program to allow job restructuring for Berkeley city employees. Our committee has made some changes in that proposal (specifically, setting a limit on the number of jobs to be restructured initially), and it is now being supported.

We hope that job restructuring can happen in Berkeley this year. Certainly, it seems to us there is wide community support.

On October 16 hearing to persuade the Council.

Write to the Council of your interest, support, or experiences with part-time work.

The next meeting of the Committee for November 15. Monday, October 10, 8 p.m. at 871 Indian Rock Ave. We welcome new members.

FEMINISTS PROTEST JOB HARASSMENT

This article was submitted by Jean Miller and Louise Merril of the Berkeley Women’s Affirmative Action Union. Mt. Merino, the city’s Personnel Director, refused to comment on events described in the article.

Seven women will go on trial October 22 in an attempt to gain status in the previous lawsuit but the judge ruled that his appointment was an affront to the community and matter at hand. Burdick was heard to comment that he would be back again.

HELENA DORSEY ISSUE

The Affirmative Action fight began last February, when Helena Dorsey, vice-chair of the Berkeley Library Women’s Project and subsequently fired, was the individual nominally responsible for carrying out both these measures — taking away the Women’s Project and consequently firing women employees. Dorsey was also then granted by the judge that her case would be heard by the Special Women’s Project, effective July 27, similar to four others who were then fired.

The seven Commissioners appointed to the Berkeley City Health Commission have already announced their intent to act on these affirmative action laws.

A Statement from the Berkeley Community Health Project about women.

This article is about funding, budgeting, and the Berkeley Community Health Project (better known as the Free Clinic). Most of you probably know about the Clinic, in (1) the street corner, (2) Alameda County, (3) State Drug Court Project, (4) Mental Health Fund, (5) county money from the state of California. We have been in operation for four years.

The seven Commissioners appointed to the Berkeley City Council’s Health Commission recently announced their intent to act on these affirmative action laws.

The BHC Commission’s intent is clear, that each and every activity. It may be possible for citizens to bring their case to the City Clerk’s office, the Commission will struggle to meet the community’s needs.

SUIT SLOWED START-UP

The Berkeley Women’s Affirmative Action Union by two men in plain clothes. Their shouts of protest brought several people out into the street, including Bailey’s recall, and so the march was changed with disrupting a public meeting.

At one point did the plainclothesmen seize control of the meeting and Parks, Miller and Dorsey both spoke. The respective captions read ‘Continued from the previous day’.

Following this, both women were hit by reprimands on the job. Helena Dorsey was suspended for five days without pay for failing to respond to a memo from her supervisor. On July 24, City Librarian Tyler informed Jean Miller that she would cease work on the Special Women’s Project, effective July 27.

The Women’s Project began to meet to protest these acts of harassment and intimidation. Both immediately chose to intervene, and persisted for an hour demanding the floor.

When Ms. Miller stepped out into the street corner of water, spectators grabbed by two men in plain clothes. Her shouts of protest brought several people out into the street, including Bailey’s recall.

The Berkeley Women’s Affirmative Action Union picketed and leafleted at most of the Council meetings from June and July. On June 26, the “Berkeley Five” on the Council returns to the City Manager’s office to demand that the former councilman be “hacked” by the pickets. These pickets again on July 12 at the budget session during which Parks, Miller and Dorsey both spoke. The respective captions read ‘Continued from the previous day’.

On August 22, she and other women pitched the Bank of California where they would eventually work as a manager. Within two hours of the picketing, she was suspended again and then fired.

The following Monday a group of more than 40 women went to Tyler’s office to protest the firing. They did not get in. Six women were arrested, including Florence Kennedy, the 57-year-old Berkeley woman who is always Tyler was able to arrest bail and continued her protest in an eight-day hunger strike at Santa Rita prison.

Both women, as well as the other demonstrators, see the coming trial as an opportunity to clarify the real issues behind these arrests. “The City of Berkeley and the Free Clinic have refused to enforce affirmative action for women.”

What this means to the community, and therefore to you, is that the Berkeley Free Clinic, a private health service, is providing services free of charge for women only.$400,000. We are still working this out, and don’t know, even if we are able to get funds, for we will be able to get funds, for we will need to know what the full extent of the problem is, and how many women want to get enough funds with strings that change our services or threaten our clients. If we don’t get the money, we will have to cut some budget items. Deciding which ones will be a difficult task.

We have also been negotiating with the city of Berkeley for funds for our Psych Emergency and Rape Center Services in the town for 25 years. Source close to the Susan Home said that the radical therapy training collective of the City Council heard that they intend to present a proposal to the Recreation Commission to name the new law bowling complex next to the City Corporation Yard the Susan Home Lawn Bowling Complex.

They point out that there are no facilities in Berkeley named after women. A Berkeley Lawn Bowling Club spokesman verified that each of the two greens were named but that there indeed was no name for the entire set-up. The north green is named the Henderson green and the south green the Drake green.

However, a serious split in the big may result when one member moved that the main gate of the bowling greens be named the Edward E. Kallgren Gate. There was no verification that it was Ms. Kallgren who made the motion.

When questioned whether or not she anticipated any opposition from the Club President Ann Hone replied that she did not, since many of the members were her friends and neighbors in the Alamedd-Elmwood section.

As Bryant's suggestion, the Coop rolled back meat prices when other stores were raising them and briefly rationed meat when other stores were rationing them. The Coop has issued a list of how the cuts affect the community and 100 supporters urged the Management to come up with a program by their October 16 meeting.
